THE THEME OF THIS FALL'S CARILLON, APTLY DELIVERED AT THE HEIGHT OF OUR NATION'S PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION SEASON, IS "BEING HEARD." I TRUST THAT ALL OGLETHORPE ALUMS HAVE EXERCISED THEIR RESPONSIBILITY TO VOTE (HOW COULD ONE NOT, AFTER FOUR YEARS OF ABSORBING THE LIFE LESSONS OF THE CORE?), SO AT LEAST WE HAVE ALL BEEN HEARD ON THIS TOPIC.

BY Dr. Lawrence M. Schall

Voting every few years is certainly one example of raising one's voice, but at Oglethorpe, the voices of our faculty and students are heard every day. In the pages that follow, you will hear the varied voices of members of our Political Science faculty. Drs. Kendra King and Joseph Knippenberg. This semester, dozens of our students have become actively engaged in politics, local and national. They have been passionately involved in service projects at such places as Grant Park and with community partners including Drew Elementary School and the South Atlanta High School of Law and Social Justice. And on a very local front, Oglethorpe embarked this past spring on an institution-wide strategic planning process.

The goal of the planning committee, consisting of 25 representatives from faculty, staff, trustees, students and alumni, is to have a plan in place by summer 2009. At one of our early meetings, the question was asked: Why is Oglethorpe doing a strategic plan now? You might be surprised that even this question started quite a conversation - people on the committee obviously want to be heard. I want to share my answer with you, our alumni. In return to that question, I cordially invite you to be heard on the subject, too. (Please send emails to lschall@oglethorpe.edu) I promise I will answer every note I receive.

Oglethorpe has embarked on creating a strategic plan because we have a unique opportunity ahead of us. Some have said that liberal arts and science colleges can no longer compete with educational institutions which offer students a plethora of pre-professional opportunities. I know this is not true. Last year, over 4,000 high school seniors applied for admission to Oglethorpe. I also know that, on average, college graduates will hold a dozen jobs in their lifetime, many of which don't even exist today. The skills that will be in high demand in this new economy are critical thinking, effective communication and creative problem-solving. The education we provide has never been more relevant.

I also believe that Oglethorpe can become a compelling choice each year for hundreds of top students across the county if we continue to discover effective and creative ways to connect our enduring mission (the liberal arts) to our place (Atlanta). We know that our location is the number one reason most students cite for choosing Oglethorpe. We know that cities are hot among college bound students in a way that urban sites have never been before. Specifically, we know Atlanta is the number one destination for young college-educated people. And we know that Atlanta offers thousands of opportunities for engagement and learning.

If we look at the kinds of things going on at Oglethorpe today, the power of linking our mission with our place can clearly be seen. The Core, after all, was founded on the ideal of citizenship and today, it continues to offer our students a foundation for becoming responsible citizens.

Last spring, we offered a course on micro-finance that challenged students to think globally, and was funded and co-taught by local Atlanta social entrepreneurs. Five of our natural science professors are working on an interdisciplinary course to be taught this year addressing the issue of traffic in Atlanta (Yes, we have traffic in Atlanta). We have faculty teaching urban ecology; others teach in the urban leadership program. The English department has offered courses on the literature of the city and the country. Our Education faculty helps prepare future teachers to be successful in diverse, urban districts. Our Political Science faculty makes great use of local politicians in their courses, and our Theatre students are increasingly connected to our own Georgia Shakespeare. Students make use of Oglethorpe Museum, as well as museums and galleries in Atlanta and other cities; our new mini-semester in New York is a dynamic example of liberal teaching at its best. Students interested in music were once again hosted this fall at the Atlanta Symphony. This morning, I met with two amazing students who were selected from a cast of hundreds for internships at the Carter Center. The Center for Civic Engagement provides support every day to faculty who already use the city as a laboratory; members of our biology faculty visit the Blue Heron Nature Preserve each semester to enhance the learning that goes on inside our gates. In Communications and Rhetoric Studies, Atlanta offers a dynamic resource to faculty and students, through internships with such places as CNN and Cox Communications. About 25 percent of our students currently intern in the city.

Why not all of them?

Every successful institution has an identity—a brand if you will. This brand is something relevant, readily identifiable and unique to the institution. It never defines everything the institution does, but provides coherence to its education that the market finds compelling. In my view for Oglethorpe, I return to what it is that we have and what we can promise that is unique. And I believe that is a combination of our mission AND place, discovering new ways to integrate our curriculum, represented by the Core, with the learning opportunities presented by the community in which we live. That, I suggest, needs to lie at the heart of our plan going forward.

What do you think? Be heard.

BY Dr. Stephen Herschler

IT'S HARD TO IMAGINE MORE APPROPRIATE WORDS TO FRAME MY FIRST MISSIVE TO YOU AS PROVOST THAN 'BEING HEARD.' NO STRANGER TO OGLETHORPE, I PRIDE MYSELF ON THE RANGE OF PEOPLE – FACULTY, STUDENTS, STAFF, AND, YES, ALUMNI—WITH WHOM I ENGAGE. THESE RELATIONSHIPS FORM THE FOUNDATION OF ESTABLISHING EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION AS PROVOST. AT THE SAME TIME, MY NEW POSITION NECESSARILY INFLUENCES THE FORM AND SUBSTANCE OF MY INTERACTIONS WITH OTHERS. CONTINUITY? YES, BUT A PALPABLE CHANGE AS WELL.

In effecting this transition, I find myself drawing upon my academic training. The most obvious parallel is some 20 years of studying organizations and administrative reform, including time spent in France, Senegal, and China. Equally relevant, however, is my training in qualitative research methods.

Qualitative research is ideographic, not nomothetic. In other words, it does not seek to establish whether the world accords with pre-existing theories. Rather, it seeks to elicit how human beings' understandings of themselves and the world around them shape their perceptions of and actions in the world. Such a research approach requires not just that one listens, it requires concerted efforts to ensure that people are actually 'being heard.'

Alumni, as a group of vital importance to Oglethorpe, certainly need to be heard—now more than ever. This summer, Oglethorpe University commenced a strategic planning initiative. The aim is to have in place by the end of this academic year a plan that will guide OU to a place of institutional strength and prominence in 10 years' time. Input from all facets of the OU community is vital to ensuring that this plan reflects its aspirations and thereby garners its support.

That being said, alumni have a special role to play. Having completed an Oglethorpe education, you have the advantage of perspective. Just as I have found my education to serve me well in the present, you know the contribution that your Oglethorpe education has made to your personal and professional development. You understand the long-term consequences of your education.

By the time you receive this, most of you should have received an email from the Strategic Planning Steering Committee requesting your responses to some survey questions. I heartily encourage you to take the time to answer these questions. I and other members of the Steering Committee also welcome any additional input and suggestions you care to make.

Let me assure you, you are being heard.

OGLETHORPE COMEBACK WINS TUNICA NATIONAL

BY Erin L. Greer

The Stormy Petrels set a school record for a par 72 course in September, coming in seven under par 281 to win the 3rd Annual Rhodes College Fall Invitational at Tunica National near Memphis. The win came despite the Petrels being four strokes behind Huntingdon College in the first round. In the end, the Petrels won the match with a score of 579 to Huntingdon's 582.

Oglethorpe totaled a record 5 players in the top nine spots. Oglethorpe "B" Craig Stevenson 70-72 = 142 and Oglethorpe "A" Olafur Loftsson 73-69 = 142 tied for 3rd and earned All Tournament honors. Senior Hap Kaufold "B" 72-73-145, Sophomore Matt Rebitch "A" 74-71=145, and Junior Scott Pugh "A" 75-70=145 all tied for 7th. Junior David Dilibero 73-73=146 finished 14th and Freshman Matt Bernstein 77-71=148, finished 18th. Of the OU "A" and "B" teams, eight of the 10 players landed in the Top 20.

OGLETHORPE PRESIDENT, ALUMNI, TRUSTEES, STUDENTS GO GREEN AT ECOMANOR

University President Dr. Lawrence M. Schall joined many members of the OU staff, alumni, students and Board of Trustees for a tour of EcoManor Sept. 23. The environmentally friendly home, owned by Rutherford and Laura Turner Seydel '84, served as an example to guests of the benefits of "living green." Among the amenities OU Honor students and members of the ECOS (Environmentally Conscious Oglethorpe Students) student organization observed: low VOC (volatile organic compound) paints, stains and sealants, all-natural fiber fabric on furniture and rugs, natural cleansing products, recyclable housing tools, devices to channel rain water for home use, the home's 26 solar panels and much more. Information on EcoManor is available at www.ecomanor.com.

EVENING DEGREE STUDENT WINS OLYMPICS INTERNSHIP

Like the famous Long Corridor with more than 7,000 stories, Joe Sutton '09, an Oglethorpe University evening degree program student, has many tales of China to tell. This summer, Sutton served as an intern for NBC Universal during the television giant's coverage of the Beijing Olympics.

Employed at Turner Broadcasting for five years now, Sutton was introduced to the NBC opportunity through his affiliation with the Emma Bowen Foundation. He applied, and a few months later was informed that he had received one of five fully-paid scholarships to join NBC overseas.

The trip was laden with fascinating experiences for Sutton. His first time overseas, Sutton's adventure began when he arrived too late to catch his international flight. Rerouted, Sutton finally landed in China, only to be overcome by smog and detained by Chinese authority for taking photos inside of the "Bird's Nest." It was a frightening experience—much like the culinary delicacies which included cow stomach, scorpions, silk worms and sea horse. But overall, Sutton, the youngest student in the OU evening degree program, said China was a breath-taking country.

"The technology is so far advanced compared to here in America. The cost of living is very affordable as well," Sutton said. "But what I really loved was the people. They were very attentive; they tried to be as helpful as possible. The college students there spoke very good English. They said it was mandatory they learn it if they want to have a good job."

Among the other gems Sutton gathered while attending Olympic swimming, diving, tennis and track and field? "The motto [of the Olympics] was 'One World, One Dream,' and when you reflect on that, it really makes you wonder why is it that we can't all become one. Why is there so much hate and imbalance in the world when we have so many things that bond us together?"

A communications major and political science minor from Atlanta, Sutton said his role for NBC—digital editing, the interview processes, camera work, scheduling infrastructure, Web site content quality control, streaming media encoding and distribution—will help him on his way to a continued career in media. But his personal experiences will help him better relate to his worldwide audience. "They have different beliefs and systems. If we want to have diplomatic talks and a world where communication is possible, we have to visit countries and learn about their cultures and be willing to accept people and their cultures as they are," he said.

PROJECT VOTE SMART VISITS OGLETHORPE

Project Vote Smart, a non-partisan group dedicated to providing information on the nation's political candidates, their stances on key issues and their funding from special interest groups, visited the Oglethorpe campus as part of its national Voter Self-Defense System campaign. The project's mobile training center, a 45-foot bus, was stationed on the university's academic quad Sept. 25. During the visit, students and faculty received information on the voting records and monetary ties of all members of the United States House and Senate. Information on Project Vote Smart is available at www.vote-smart.org.

ALUMNI FALL SPORTS DAY Once again, students and alumni turned out in full force for Alumni Fall Sports Day Sept. 27. Volleyball began at 9 a.m., and the alumni game took place before the East/West Cross Conference Tournament. But despite the efforts of Athletic Director Jay Gardiner and Women's Soccer Coach Alan Woods, the home team fell to the Alumni team.

A Kids Clinic was held at 1:30 p.m. and was followed by the sixth annual John P. Salamone Alumni Soccer Tournament. Four teams, featuring more than 30 alumni players took the field with OU President Dr. Lawrence Schall and OU soccer coach Jon Akin. The Grey Team took home honors at the event, which was established in 2003 in memoriam of John Salamone '86, who died in the terrorist attacks in New York on Sept. 11, 2001.

JAPAN TRIP

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR JAY GARDINER FEATURED IN MAGAZINE

Oglethorpe players have often heard Assistant Dean and Athletic Director Jay Gardiner's "Six Keys for Success," but, thanks to an article in Athletic Management magazine, coaches and athletes from around the country will now be able to benefit from Gardiner's experience.

In his article, which ran in the October/November issue, Gardiner outlines how his six principles "have helped me treat people fairly and equitably by forcing an honest and straightforward approach to dealing with others." In fact, they have proven so effective that Gardiner says he has had the principles posted on the wall of every office he has ever occupied.

So what are the principles?

1. Listen generously; 2. Speak straight; 3. Honor others' commitments; 4. Be for each other; 5. Applaud achievement; and 6. Criticize in private.

While the principles may sound vague as a bare-bones list, Gardiner is always more than happy to flesh them out for those who are willing to listen, as he does in the Athletic Management article. If you didn't catch the issue, you can always catch the principles in action while cheering for the Petrels courtside.

This past May, associate professor Robert Steen proved Oglethorpe's claims that a liberal arts education can take you anywhere you want to go. For Steen and 10 study abroad students, "anywhere you want to go" just happened to be Japan.

From May 10 to the 25, the group enjoyed a two-week study tour in language and culture based in Kanazawa, a former castle town and thriving modern city located on the west coast of Japan. Students actively engaged with the local culture through language classes, workshops, excursions and living with a host family. Many used bicycles to commute to school and get around the city.

Integral to the learning experience were three hours of language instruction per day at Euracentres Kanazawa, a highly respected language school. Afternoon programs provided an understanding of local history and culture through visits to historical sites, traditional gardens, a cooking class and a tea ceremony. A weekend trip to the Noto Peninsula featured a tour of a Shinto shrine and a visit to a hot spring bath overlooking the Japan Sea.

OGLETHORPE PRESIDENT HONORED

Oglethorpe President Dr. Lawrence M. Schall received an award from the Georgia Justice Project at the annual Grass Roots Justice Awards Oct. 15 for his leadership in advancing the cause of equal justice in the community.

Before joining Oglethorpe, Schall, an attorney with Philadelphia Community Legal Services and later the Juvenile Law Center of Philadelphia, litigated on behalf of children in both dependency and delinquency courts. In his role as president of Oglethorpe, Schall's vision has been to integrate the liberal arts with service to community. Under his leadership, Oglethorpe opened the Center for Civic Engagement in 2006, connecting its students to the city of Atlanta and beyond. Oglethorpe was also named to the President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll for two consecutive years, the only Georgia institution of higher education to receive this distinction.

Founded in 1986, Georgia Justice Project seeks to transform courtrooms, communities and people to provide justice, opportunity and hope to the poor of Atlanta while building community awareness and understanding. The Grass Roots Justice Awards honor individuals whose personal objectives and accomplishments embody GJP's own. Dr. Schall was one of three recipients at this year's event.

ROOSEVELT PAPERS

Oglethorpe made local, regional and national news this semester when the university unveiled signed transcripts from a famous speech delivered by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932. The speech, which was delivered at the Fox Theatre as a commencement address for Oglethorpe University, spoke to the economic hardships of the Great Depression, and, as writers for numerous news organizations including the Wall Street Journal noted, drew uncanny parallels with the nation's current economic struggles. Due to the overwhelming response, the papers continue to be on display at the Oglethorpe University Museum of Art, along with a statue and bust of Roosevelt, which are on loan from the Yatesville Public Library, until December 7.

WHO'S NEW AT OU:

Meet the New Professors

DEVON BELCHER

Professor Devon Belcher says there are two reasons he teaches philosophy: one, because it's the only job you can have where you actually practice philosophy and two, because he enjoys turning people on to "cool little puzzles."

"It's fun analyzing these mind puzzles," Belcher laughed. "Some say 'Oh that's weird!' and others say 'Hey, that's neat!'"

A self-professed "technology geek," Belcher admits he is drawn to the philosophies of math and computation. Which, even he admits, cannot completely account for his love of online gaming, especially Battlefield 2142.

Belcher, who teaches epistemology, Plato and Core, remembers having an interest in philosophy at a young age. He was initially taken with the subject when asked "Where is the edge of space? And if there is an edge, what's beyond it? And would what's beyond it be space?"

"Some people are just grabbed by certain questions," Belcher explains.

While Belcher has lived throughout the United States and in various places in Europe, he comes to Oglethorpe from the University of Colorado, where he received his master's and doctorate. He received his undergraduate degree from Reed College.

When he isn't confounding students with the "cool little puzzles," Belcher said he enjoys cooking, especially barbecue. In fact, he and fellow philosophy professor Simon Sparks are considering hosting an Iron Chef competition next semester on campus to demonstrate their culinary prowess.

RONALD P. BOBROFF

Politics professor Ronald P. Bobroff, a New Hampshire native, has many passions—astronomy for one. Skiing is another. Once, he even skied on a glacier in Austria. But, even with his love of stars and the speed of the slopes, Bobroff admits he has another weakness: Russian history. He wrote his novel, Roads to Glory, on the topic, and is working on another book, Ties that bind: The Franco-Russian Alliance in State and Society, 1890-1920, presently. He said he looks forward to imparting a bit of his enthusiasm on his History 320 and 321 classes, both of which focus on Russia.

"It's wonderful," Bobroff commented on being a professor of Russian history. "You are constantly working on and discussing things you are interested in."

Bobroff holds degrees from Duke University, the University of Pennsylvania and the London School of Economics. He has also lived abroad, spending nearly a year in Russia to research his book. He comes to Oglethorpe after spending seven years as an assistant professor at Wake Forest University.

Bobroff said he joined the Oglethorpe family because he was impressed by the level of student/teacher interaction the campus offered. "It allows for the sharing of knowledge," he said.

In addition to Russia, astronomy and skiing, Bobroff loves to travel and said he and his wife strive to take at least one international trip every year. Bobroff is also passionate about Schnauzers and is involved in Schnauzer Rescue of the Carolinas.

LEAH R. ZINNER

Originally from Columbia, MD, Psychology Professor Leah R. Zinner opted for southern sunshine over homeland snow and moved to Atlanta to attend Emory University where she studied social perceptions of interracial couples. Then—following a two-year stint with the Centers for Disease Control—Zinner thought she might take another chance on that snow.

"I decided to attend graduate school, and headed north to the University of Wisconsin, Madison to continue the research I had begun as an undergraduate," recalls Zinner, who less-than-fondly remembers trudging through Wisconsin in -15 degree weather. "You would have icicles hanging from your eyelashes... the weather report would literally say 'exposed skin will get frostbite in 20 minutes.'"

While in graduate school, Zinner's research spanned a variety of topics related to emotion, prejudice and intergroup relations. But while Zinner spent her scholastic years studying others, the pursuit also taught her something about herself: she loves to teach.

"I'm thrilled to be at Oglethorpe," Zinner says. "The close-knit community here is very friendly and inviting, and I feel very lucky that I'm able to do what I enjoy most—teach undergraduates—in a city that I love. I will be teaching a variety of psychology courses, including Social Psychology, Organizational Psychology, Research Methods, Advanced Experimental Methods, as well as others in the future."

In addition to her interests in psychology and teaching, Zinner is an avid fan of ballet and ethnic food.

Veronica Menzes Holmes

Kay Rensing

Xinsong Wang

VERONICA MENZES HOLMES '02

Ask any student who has ever visited Professor Veronica Menzes Holmes' office, the British Guiana (now Guyana) native is definitely "a citizen of the world."

From her rich, red walls to her photos of African tribesmen to her statue from Zimbabwe, Holmes' surroundings reflect her diverse travels and background. An Oglethorpe alumna, Holmes has traveled throughout the Americas, Europe, Africa and Australia. In fact, during her tenure at OU, Holmes had three residencies—one in Atlanta, one in France and one in Australia.

Holmes said the inspiration for her travels is the same as the inspiration for her scholastic endeavors—curiosity. Curiosity, she says, is what drove her to beg her mother to enroll her in kindergarten at age of three. Since that time, Holmes has excelled in academia and received numerous fellowships, grants and honors as well as degrees from Oglethorpe and Georgia State Universities. She graduated with honors from Oglethorpe with a bachelor's degree in philosophy in 2002.

In 2005, Holmes accepted a position as Adjunct Professor in Core, and this fall she began teaching the first three years of Core on a full-time basis. Additionally, Holmes served on the President's Advisory Council for five years before becoming a Trustee. In July of 2008, she became one of three Trustee Advisors.

When she isn't serving as a Trustee Advisor or teaching future OU alumni, Holmes spends her time working with non-profit organizations which work to benefit low-income African American communities. Holmes is presently pursuing a master's degree in religion at Georgia State University.

KAY RENSING

Students studieren des Deutschen (studying German) have likely already seen Professor Kay Rensing around campus. In Atlanta for a year on a teaching exchange program, Rensing has taken to teaching German 101 and 201 like a fische to water, bringing his brother to class to play linguistic guinea pig—"he pretends that he can only speak German, so the students have to talk with him in German"—and reestablishing German Movie Nights which run in Earl Dolive Hall throughout the Fall.

A graduate of the University of Dortmund's Teacher Education Program, Rensing hopes his teaching opportunity at Oglethorpe will do more than instill in his students the differences between der, das and die. "My focus is on cultural learning as well as language. You learn culture through language and language through culture," he says.

The appeal to teaching, Rensing says, is the interest in individual development. "I am a teacher because I love seeing my students develop," he says. "There is also a good deal of idealism in it: Through my work as a teacher I can do my part in making the world a better place by developing critical thinkers."

On the whole, Rensing says he is enjoying his time at Oglethorpe, getting to know the "friendly" students and staff, but he admits Atlanta's transportation leaves something to be desired.

"When I got here I expected to be able to buy a bike and ride to the University," he says. "But if I had done that, I think it would have killed me...This city is not very pedestrian friendly."

Rensing returns to Germany next year, where he said he hopes to accept a position in upper secondary education.

XINSONG WANG

Xinsong (Pine) Wang, Oglethorpe visiting Assistant Professor of Politics, can tell you a thing or two about perspective. In Tibet, Wang climbed an 18,000-foot snow-covered mountain. He has also experienced the sunset over La Jolla beach in San Diego, California. Though vastly different views from vastly different altitudes, Wang witnessed the beauty in both landscapes. The beauty of perspective is part of why he loves to travel, and part of why he loves to study American democracy as it relates to his native country of China.

Wang's research specialties include institution-building and governance in authoritarian states and grassroots democratic movements in China. His passion for his homeland led Wang to Atlanta's Carter Center where he worked with the China Program from 2002 to 2006 to "develop pilot projects on local people's congress elections and empowering local people's deputies in China."

Wang served as a member of the Carter Center's delegations to monitor the village, township, and county elections in China, and also participated in a Duke University China Elections Study Group, which initiated and implemented pilot projects to standardize direct elections of urban residential committees.

At Oglethorpe, Wang said he wants to continue working to foster positive relationships. "I really enjoy the friendly and intimate environment at Oglethorpe University, and it makes me feel that teaching is not solely a job. It is a responsibility to this family-like community," he said.

Wang received his Ph.D. and M.A. in political science from Georgia State University and his B.A. in English and Diplomacy from Foreign Affairs College in China. He teaches Comparative Politics, Asian Politics and will teach Politics of the Developing World and Chinese Politics next spring. When he isn't teaching, Wang enjoys playing Eric Clapton's "Tears In Heaven" on his guitar and cooking traditional Chinese dishes including spicy tofu.

POLITICS AND YOU: REFLECTIONS ON THE PAST AND A FOCUS ON THE FUTURE

COMPILED BY Fred Agul '52, Erin Greer, and Solter

Oglethorpe University claims a long-standing tradition of political and social involvement.
This tradition, reflected in the life of university
namesake James Edward Oglethorpe, continues to evolve as students, faculty and alumni take their place in history.

JAMES EDWARD OGLETHORPE

by Erin L. Greer

Born in 1696 in Surrey, England, James Edward Oglethorpe learned the importance of political involvement at a young age. Through his military career, which began in adolescence, he fell under the service of some of England's most prominent citizens, and, in 1722 at the age of 26, Oglethorpe's influence and connections won him a seat in Parliament where he would serve for 32 years.

Oglethorpe's years in politics were dedicated to philanthropy and service. A noted defender of colonial rights and opponent of slavery, Oglethorpe used his position and influence to promote the ideas of equality. In England he, along with other famous military men on the Prison Discipline Committee, witnessed first-hand the atrocities of both the Fleet and Marshalsea Debtors Prisons. (Oglethorpe himself had a close friend who had died of smallpox in such a prison.) Fueled by his distaste for this injustice, Oglethorpe fought for prison reform and joined with the likes of Lord Percival and sign-up of 21 others in creating a charter for the new debtor's colony named Georgia (in honor of King George II). Oglethorpe used his connections to move the Charter for the colony of Georgia quickly to the king, who signed it on June 9, 1732.

Oglethorpe went on to serve as the first executive officer of the new colony. Living by the motto of Georgia's Trustees, "Not for self, but for others," Oglethorpe worked tirelessly on behalf of the less fortunate, and, flouting trustee bans, permitted Lutheran Salzburgers and other persecuted religious minorities to settle in Georgia. Additionally, Oglethorpe promoted race relations which were ahead of his time, showing great respect for American Indians and being vocal of his opposition to slavery.

With the new colony came new hardships. During his service, he saw many economic and military trials, one of which being the famous Battle of Bloody Marsh. Oglethorpe continued to serve on the Board of Trustees of Georgia, but, as the trustees gradually relaxed restrictions on alcohol and slavery, Oglethorpe's ties with the board became strained. By 1750 Georgia's founder was no longer involved with the board.

Oglethorpe was called back to England in disfavor, despite his many humanitarian efforts in Georgia. Eventually, he began a long retirement. Before his death the General enthusiastically greeted John Adams, ambassador to England from the newly formed United States. He had lived to see his infant colony become a free and independent state.

At the age of 88 the General died at Cranham Hall on June 30, 1785.

TIMELINE

The charter establishing Oglethorpe University is issued, one day before the 139th anniversary of the birth of James Edward Oglethorpe. The university was originally established in Midway, Ga.

Famous scientists Joseph LeConte and James Woodrow (uncle of President Woodrow Wilson) held professorships at the university.

January

Civil War hardships force the closure of the university. Oglethorpe will go on to reopen briefly in 1866, but it closes again in 1869.

1870

Post-war financial problems plague the University. Oglethorpe is closed again at the request of the Synod, but Presbyterian activism in the Reconstruction period remained strong, and the goal of establishing and maintaining an institution of higher education continued.

1910

The cornerstone is laid on the new Atlanta campus. A letter from President Woodrow Wilson, nephew of former OU professor James Woodrow, is read at ceremony. In his letter, President Wilson expressed "a deep interest in the revival of a university which deserves to be cherished by all who are interested in higher education." Oglethorpe University opens again in 1916 with 45 students.

1836

December
1835

Carlyle Pollock Beman, New York native, becomes the first president of OU. The 21 founders of the university were Presbyterian, and Presbyterians of the time had considerable political clout. Church leaders at this time feared the evils of city life might affect the university's students, as Midway was located only a short distance from Georgia's capital city of Milledgeville.

1850s

May 30,
1862

Sidney Lanier, famous poet, musician and critic, enrolls at Oglethorpe University. While a student, he formed close ties with scientist James Woodrow.

Trustees purchase the John Neal house on Washington Street in downtown Atlanta and the university relocates, but despite the promise of the new location, OU does not prosper.

Joseph M. Brown, class of 1872, becomes governor of Georgia. He serves through 1913.

1909

Thornwell Jacobs organizes a series of "Pan Presbyterian" gatherings in Atlanta to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Southern Presbyterian Church. But the meetings also have a secondary purpose—to stir up interest in plans to reestablish Oglethorpe University. By 1912, Jacobs has garnered the interest of the first 100 contributors to the Oglethorpe project, and the group held their first meeting Sept. 17, 1912. Jacobs would be appointed president of OU in 1915.

January 15,

Newspaper giant and Democratic New York Congressman William Randolph Hearst is awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree from the university. A political powerhouse, the influence of Hearst's newspaper syndicate was one of the leading causes of the United States' entry into the Spanish American War in 1898. Hearst's life served as one of the driving inspirations for Orson Welles' classic, Citizen Kane. Phoebe Hearst Hall on Oglethorpe's campus is named for the mother of William Randolph Hearst.

Thomas Kimmwood

Peters is hired as an archivist for Jacobs' revolutionary time capsule, the Crypt of Civilization and will be opened in 1113. For the project, Peters microfilmed 960,000 pages of reading material. The Crypt was sealed on May 28, 1940.

Charles Longstreet Weltner

graduates from Oglethorpe. A staunch Civil Rights advocate, Weltner, a Democrat, served in Congress from 1963-1967. In 1964, Newsweek declared him a "prototype of the articulate young congressman—the 'new breed' on whom so many Southern moderates stake their hopes for the future." A year earlier, Weltner had become the first southern politician to condemn his colleagues for standing mute after the bombing of a Birmingham, Alabama, church that killed four young African American girls. Following his terms in Congress, Weltner served as a judge in the Supreme Court of Georgia. Weltner received the Kennedy Library Profiles in Courage Award in 1991.

Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter

hands an official proclamation to OU President Paul Kenneth Vonk which declares February Independent Higher Education Month in Georgia.

Dr. James Whitney Bunting

takes office of mayor of North Atlanta and resigns as president of Oglethorpe.

April 29,
1977

May 23,
1932

February 12,
1954

April 29,
1977

Governor of New York and future president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree and delivered the commencement address for Oglethorpe University. His commencement address, which was given at the Fox Theater in Atlanta, reflected the New Deal principles that he would later deliver to the nation as the president of the United States. Georgia Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. and Barron Collier also attended the ceremony.

Thornwell Jacobs' tenure ends. In his near 30 years as president, Jacobs oversaw numerous projects and conferred degrees on figures including Woodrow Wilson, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Amelia Earhart.

The faculty of the university passes a resolution to celebrate Oglethorpe Day, the day the colony was founded in 1733 by James Edward Oglethorpe.

Griffin Bell, 77th Attorney General of the U.S. under President Jimmy Carter, is keynote speaker at Law Day and Convocation.

1948

Legendary basketball coach Garland Pinholster begins his 10 year reign at Oglethorpe. During his coaching years, Pinholster was an advocate of Civil Rights and often elected to play African American teams. Following his years as coach, Pinholster went on to serve as a Republican in the Georgia House of Representatives and also served as Dean of Administration and a Trustee at Oglethorpe. Pinholster was inducted into the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame in 1980 and received an honorary doctorate from the university in 2004.

Anne Cox Chambers daughter of newspaperman and Democrat James M. Cox is picked as President Jimmy Carter's Ambassador to Belgium. Chambers received an honorary degree from OU in 1983.

J.B. Fuqua, CEO of Fuqua Industries and Chairman of the Democratic Party of Georgia, gives the address at commencement exercises. Fuqua was a self-made businessman, and, as Democratic Chair, ran Carl Sanders' successful campaign for governor in 1962 and was instrumental in Jimmy Carter's early political career. In his later years, Fuqua became well known as a philanthropist, having donated more than $100 million to various charities.

Georgia Governor Joe Frank Harris gives the address at commencement exercises.

1991 Georgia Governor, and honorary degree recipient, Zell Miller delivered the commencement address.

His Holiness, the Dalai Lama, visits the Oglethorpe University Museum of Art for "The Mystical Arts of Tibet" exhibition, which featured the Dalai Lama's personal sacred objects.

Former New York City mayor and Republican presidential candidate Rudy Giuliani holds a "town hall" meeting at Oglethorpe University.

August 12, 1983

1988

May 18, 1986

1989

1998

September 2006

State Rep. John Lewis speaks in Lupton Auditorium on the Civil Rights Movement.

Oct. 17, 2008

May 16, 2007

U.S. Sen. Saxby Chambliss, R-Ga., holds a Town Hall meeting on Oglethorpe's campus where he discusses the nation's current financial crisis and his plans for encouraging the development of alternative fuels.

Thrasyvoulos Stamatopoulos, Consul of Greece, is an honored guest at an OU Luncheon.

Billy Payne, Olympics organizer, and honorary degree recipient delivers the OU commencement address.

Dr. Robert Parker, astronaut who flew the STS-9/spacelab-1 mission in 1983, addresses the Oglethorpe Community Leaders Luncheon in April. Also in 1988, Andrew W. Thomson, Secretary and organizer of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's constituency, spoke at the Oglethorpe Community Leaders Luncheon in November.

A portion of Peachtree Road is dedicated to OU alumnus and Trustee Steven J. Schmidt, '40, World War II pilot and inductee in both the Oglethorpe and Georgia Sports Halls of Fame. Schmidt received an honorary doctorate of laws in 1986. Georgia Governor Sonny Purdew delivered the dedication.

STUDENT VIEWS ON VOTING AND THE CURRENT POLITICAL CLIMATE

Alesha Tentinger '09:

Some of the most important issues to me are our economy—especially right now—and the war in Iraq. Those are the two biggest factors I am looking at right now.

Shaquitta Brookins '09:

I guess my main concern with the way the campaign is running now is that we're so focused on changing the face of politics that we're not focusing on changing the issues that are relevant to all Americans—policies and things of that nature. Because when you get past race and gender and get to the real issues, we all have the same opinions. We all want healthcare, we want funding for education. We want to fulfill the promise that all Americans have.

Ember Melcher '08:

I think it's really important for students in particular to vote because you are on a campus that is full of well-informed peers and professors that can help you learn about the issues that are important to you, and it's a good time to start building a habit of performing your civic duty as a citizen of the United States. We all know that college is a habit-forming time.

Calven Mitchell '08:

It's been interesting to me to see the different candidates change their strategies for trying to get elected. At first everyone was worried about the war in Iraq and all of the sudden here comes this crisis in the economy, and it was just interesting to see how versatile each candidate was able to be.

Stephanie Jefcoat '10:

I think this year's election is pretty important because we have had the same President for a while, so I think the country is ready for some change. I think it's important for students to get involved because we are the up-and-coming group that are going to be leaders in the community, and we need to be educated about who is going to be running our community. And I always say, "You don't have a right to complain unless you vote." So if you don't like something about the government then you need to vote, and you need to research, and you need to get yourself educated.

Avery Livingston '10:

Voting is such a cornerstone of history, if you do not exercise your political freedom to vote, you are not contributing to the foundation of democracy.

Marian James '09:

I think it's very important for young people to be voting because this generation hasn't been active. At this point, with the race so close in so many states, particularly Georgia, even national campaigns are telling us that whether a candidate wins or loses is up to the college students. It's really disappointing to hear people my age say "I am not going to vote. It doesn't matter. Well, it does matter. We are the Florida of this election."

Jennifer Riley '10:

Voting is important because people should get involved. It's a one-of-a-kind election that the United States hasn't had yet so, by getting involved you are really becoming a part of history.

By Dr. Joseph M. Knippenberg, Politics Professor

Let me begin by confessing that I'm a crank and a contrarian. I comfort myself by saying that it's one of the gifts I bring to my teaching: I'm here to make students think.

When I teach Aristotle's Politics in Human Nature and Social Order, I take some pleasure in calling students' attention to the fact that, for Aristotle, democracy is a "bad regime." It's the selfish rule of the poor, who typically happen to be many, just as oligarchy is the selfish rule of the rich, who typically happen to be few. Choosing between the two would seem simply to depend upon which side you're on; neither has a real claim to moral superiority, to the allegiance of thoughtful and decent men and women who care about the common good.

Of course, I don't leave it there. Aristotle doesn't either.

He offers a qualified argument on behalf of democracy, suggesting that, in their collective capacity, "the many" (in Greek, the demos), can render judgments that are comparable in quality to those offered by the proverbial few good men. But, as anyone who has organized a covered dish supper knows, it's not just any group effort that's comparable to a meal prepared by an excellent chef. If I have to choose between a dinner catered by Paula Dean and eating at a fraternity house, I know where I'm going. (Give me heart disease rather than food poisoning any day.)

Aristotle suggests that collective judgments have to be organized, with each of us knowing how best we can contribute to the common deliberations. We have to know what we know and what we don't know, speaking about the former and shutting up about the latter.

But it isn't quite that simple. If we literally don't know, how can we be sure that those who say they know really do? Can't we be the victims of clever and eloquent hucksters? How can we be sure that those who claim expertise actually have it, or that those who have it use it for the good of the community, rather than for their own good?

Following this train of thought, Aristotle offers us a distinction between "master craftsmen" and those "educated in a subject," between doctors and those educated in medicine. The latter aren't experts, but they can understand and evaluate the arguments of those who are.

I call them "liberally educated," having received the education befitting a free human being, one capable of governing himself or herself and participating in self-government. If you don't have this sort of education, you are easy prey both to self-professed experts (who aren't) and to smart people who really don't care about your good or the good of the country.

As my students are aware that they're all getting a liberal education of this sort, they find this somewhat comforting.

Then I remind them that the number of students enrolled in liberal arts colleges in a given year would basically be enough to fill a large football stadium—say, the one at the University of Michigan that seats around 100,000. Of course this isn't the whole story—psst, you don't have to go to a liberal arts college to get a liberal education—but it ought to be sobering.

Our Founders believed that republican self-government required a liberally educated citizenry. When we look around, how much evidence of this kind of education do we see in our political leaders, let alone in our fellow citizens?

Are too few people voting or too many?

As I said, I'm a crank and a contrarian.

"Those who want to follow my argument should pull their tattered copies of Aristotle's Politics off their shelves and consult Bk. III, ch. 11. Those who would like to disagree might begin by taking a look at Hobbes's Leviathan, chs. 8 (sec. 11), 15 (sec. 21), and 46 (sec. 11)."

By Dr. Kendra King, Politics Professor

Today more than ever there is a generation of young people who refuse to be silent about the economic, political, and socio-cultural issues that are impacting both the nation and the world.

Why are they demanding that they be heard?

I believe it is a combination of things.

First, it is prophetic. Forty years after Dr. Martin L. King, Jr.'s "I've Been to the Mountaintop" speech, young people today have caught hold of his universal message that "we, as a people, will get to the Promised Land."

In this regard, this is another reason young people today are willing to register, vote, run for and even hold elective office because they understand that they have voice, opinions and power to impact change on the local, state, national and international level.

Finally, young people are being heard (making their voice known) because for the first time in the history of America the possibilities of both symbolic and substantive change are real. No longer are people holding on to "dreams" of the first woman or African American being elected into the highest office in the land. Today, young people recognize that very soon someone from one of these subsets will be the leader of the free world. As such, young people are being heard because, as Hip Hop group De La Soul said, "Stakes is High!"

RAMIKA RENEE GOURDINE '11

Sophomore Ramika Renee Gourdine considers herself an advocate for the power of the written word. As the Opinions Editor for The Stormy Petrel, Gourdine revels in translating her ideas and designs to paper, knowing that, by expressing her opinions in visually appealing ways, she is encouraging discourse and influencing the marketplace of ideas.

"I like that it's an outlet where other people can hear what I have to say," Gourdine admits. "I am also very interested in design because the way that something looks is very influential on whether or not someone reads it and the meanings they get from it."

Gourdine's interest in journalism began with her involvement in Print Journalism Magnet Program at Grady High School in Atlanta. Her activities and grades at Grady caught the attention of the Oglethorpe administration, which later awarded her the prestigious JEO Scholarship. Since then, Gourdine has been honing her OpEd chops—she won an award for Best Story for the Opinions section last year—and making her mark as an active student on campus.

In addition to her position at The Stormy Petrel, Gourdine serves as Awards Chair, Efficiency Chair and Triangle Chair for the ΣΣΣ sorority, sings second soprano with the University Singers and also works as a tutor in the Writing Center. Off-campus, she coaches the Grady High School debate team and sings with Capital City Opera. Gourdine said the size and structure of Oglethorpe has allowed her to pursue her passion for expression—an invaluable opportunity that she might not have had at another university.

"At Oglethorpe, everyone knows everyone or everyone has at least seen everyone" Gourdine explains, "so when you have something to say, it's easy to connect a face with a message."

Gourdine said she plans to continue voicing her opinion in her post graduate years—not as a journalist, but as a Human Rights Lawyer.

"Law has always been a goal for me," she says. "I argue. That's what I do."

SARAH KENDALL GAULT '10

For Pre-Med junior Sarah Kendall Gault, a life's purpose is all about service—which explains why, when she visited the campus for the first time and witnessed the See Saw for Cancer campaign, Gault knew she had found her collegiate home.

Excited about the service opportunities at Oglethorpe, Gault left her hometown of Carrollton, KY, for Atlanta, and landed amid the loving arms OU's service fraternity ΑΦΩ. A member since fall of 2006, Gault, who previously held the position of VP of Service, is now President of the chapter.

During her years of involvement, Gault and her fellow ΑΦΩ members have performed service projects with the Atlanta Community Food Bank and St. Vincent de Paul, as well as hosting the annual Trick Or Treat in Traer. Last spring, Gault was the Team Captain for the ΑΦΩ Relay for Life team.

"Being able to be so active in this organization is likely my favorite aspect of my experience here at Oglethorpe," Gault said. "It's a very rewarding activity. You can do a lot of things that make you feel good about yourself, but doing something that helps other people takes that to a whole new level."

In addition to her activism with the service fraternity, Gault is a member of the Pre-Med fraternity, ΦΔΕ. Among her activities with ΦΔΕ she sorts medical supplies for donation to developing countries.

Gault said she enjoys the work, especially as it combines her two loves—service and medicine. Her aspirations are to become a medical examiner, and she recently served as Program Chair Assistant and Audio Visual Coordinator for the 2008 National Association of Medical Examiners' Annual Meeting.

When she is not involved in fraternity activities, Gault works in the office of the Chief Medical Examiner in Louisville, KY. She said she is currently working to establish such a position with the Fulton County Medical Examiners' Office.

OLAFUR BJORN LOFTSSON '11

The originator of the old adage "actions speak louder than words" may well have been commenting on Olafur Bjorn Loftsson's performance in the Greensboro College Fall Tournament. Whereas others might have given up if their golf bag rolled into the water on the 13th hole and they had to single-handedly go and retrieve it, Loftsson—soaking wet and with drenched equipment—continued to play, shooting a bogie, a birdie and four pars to finish the match with a 74.

Listed as a sophomore, Loftsson came to Oglethorpe as an exchange student from his native country of Iceland, where he began golfing at age 13. The sport has been good to Loftsson, whose +2 handicap has already landed him slots on several international tours.

Loftsson comes by his love of the game honestly. Both of his parents are golfers—his father, Loftur Olafsson, was once the Icelandic National Champion—and golf is one of the most popular sports in his country. But Loftsson said his fondness for the game stems from more than just familial influence. To Loftsson, golf is about representing his country.

"It's often a lot of pressure," Loftsson says of playing before an international audience. "We have a really small country so the pressure is pretty high. But the reward of representing your country feels pretty good."

In addition to serving as a form of athletic ambassador, Loftsson said his sports experiences, including six years on the Icelandic National Team and appearances at the European Individual and Team Championships, have allowed him to travel the globe. To date, Loftsson has been "pretty much everywhere" in Europe, played in the United States, and, this fall, played for Iceland in the 2008 World Cup Amateur in Australia.

"I love meeting new people and having a good time," Loftsson says of his travels, which include his stay at OU. "Every day [at Oglethorpe] you meet new people."

Loftsson has become a walk-on star for the OU golf team, and this fall helped Oglethorpe make school history as the winners of the Third Annual Rhodes College Fall Invitational at Tunica National.

Loftsson is a Financial Engineering major at Reykjavik University.

CLIFF CHANDLER MOORE '09

Senior psychology major Cliff Chandler Moore wants to experiment on you. But he can't tell you why.

He's "keeping it secret."

"I can't have the word get around," he explains of his Honors Program psychology research project. "It might ruin my results."

Currently working on the second of two research projects—the first, on "the study of external reinforcers on intrinsic motivation," took third prize during the 2008 Georgia Psychological Association Conference—Moore said his major has an undeniable pull.

"It's such a new science; it really just came out in the last 100 years. It's almost the 'Wild West' of research," he laughs.

Interestingly enough, Moore's fascination with psychology also spills over into his other passion—theater. Moore, who began acting at the age of four, has done several local commercials and had a role in the film Happy Campers from New Line Cinema. He is pursuing a minor in theater and performs with an independent theater group, Feint Theatre Company.

"Theater draws on the ability to diffuse into countless masks that touch upon the various elements of the human psyche," he explains. "The ability to tap into that symbiotic energy shared between the audience and the performer is something really special."

When he isn't studying or performing, Moore is active in multiple organizations including XΦ, ΑΦΩ, ΟΔΚ, ΑΧ and ΨΧ. His multiple interests and involvements are opening many doors, and Moore said he is having a difficult time choosing which path to follow. He would like to pursue a higher degree in law and possibly psychology. For now though, Moore has decided to give professional acting a go and says he plans to go to California after graduation to see if he can "make it" in the business.

ALUMNI PROFILE

'80 CHRISTOPHER MCFADDEN

BY Erin L. Greer

Some voice their ideals on the Opinion/Editorials page of the newspaper and others offer their views around the office water cooler, but for Oglethorpe alumnus Christopher J. McFadden, '80, right and wrong aren't decided in OpEds or over paper cups—they are puzzled out behind a bench.

An appellate lawyer now for two decades, McFadden channeled his years of expertise into a bid for Judge of the Court of Appeals of Georgia this year. Although he did not win the seat, he did accomplish one of his major goals in pursuing the challenge: ensuring his voice is heard.

"The decisions being made by the president and congress right now will have a substantial impact on everyone...Your own interests are on the line...the political process is ultimately where our freedoms rest."

"Part of the reason I decided to become a candidate was because I wanted to participate in the debate about what a judicial campaign should be about," said McFadden, who emphasized that judges do not run under party affiliations, but on law experience. To avoid the appearance of partisan affiliation, McFadden declined inquiries by special interest groups who sent questionnaires to assess how he would vote on controversial issues. McFadden says his stance shows his desire to rule based on law and not on opinion.

"I bring a tangible record of contributions in standing up for the ideal of the rule of law," he explained. "The proposition, as John Adams put it, that we have a government of laws and not of men."

Raised in Acron, Ohio, McFadden's father, Donald, was a judge. McFadden, who studied philosophy at Oglethorpe and received his law degree from the University of Georgia, always felt his upbringing pointed him toward the bench.

"The challenge drew me to law, and I sort of grew up with the expectation that I would go into law. My father was a judge...and some of my friends at Oglethorpe assumed I was a pre-law major," McFadden laughed. "I have wanted to be a judge for a very long time, to a significant extent because of the example set by my father. And for someone with my gifts—which are similar to his—service as a judge is the most honorable vocation to which I can aspire."

The co-author of two books, "Georgia Appellate Practice With Forms" the First and Second editions, McFadden credits his practice, headquartered in Decatur, Georgia, with providing him a new perspective on the law and how it applies to people's everyday lives. This perspective, he says, is a very personal way of affecting change in the world.

"[It's about] seeing the impact on the people who come to you at crisis moments in their lives," McFadden explained. "I have represented people who are struggling against losing their children, losing their business or losing their freedom, and that kind of deep understanding of the human aspect of the court is very important."

Among his many professional accolades, McFadden has served as an Atlanta Bar Association officer and is currently in line for that association's presidency. He also served as a Special Master for the Supreme Court of Georgia. Upon learning of his bid for office, former Oglethorpe President Manning Pattillo hosted a promotional event for McFadden last summer.

When he isn't pouring over the aspects of a case, McFadden finds other ways to make himself heard in the community. A husband and father, McFadden plays Santa Claus at Eggleston Children's Hospital, serves as a lector at Sacred Heart Catholic Church and has a black belt in Taekwondo. But if high kicks and Old Saint Nick aren't your forte, McFadden encourages everyone, regardless of beliefs, to get involved in the political process.

"Politics really cuts to the heart of it. It's where decisions that effect our lives are made. The decisions being made by the president and congress right now will have a substantial impact on everyone...Your own interests are on the line...the political process is ultimately where our freedoms rest."

With the election behind him, McFadden says he will return to the active practice of law. He said work has already picked back up, and he is looking forward to another political run, potentially in 2010.

MILFORD

OU alumni Andy Milford and Matthew White were featured in October in the Atlanta Business Chronicle's "CEO University" special section. The pair, graduates of the class of '99, credit the success of their business, Dorian Software Creations Inc., to the education they received from Oglethorpe University.

"I see the value in a liberal arts education," White says in the article. "I learned how to think critically."

Milford agreed. "There is an entrepreneurial atmosphere. The professors are focused on educating rather than on conducting research."

Milford and White began their friendship as freshman year roommates. Milford created Dorian Software in 1997 and maintained the company on his own for two years, but, when the need for a partner arose in 1999, White was the natural choice. Today, Milford serves as CEO and chief software architect, and White is the COO and VP of sales and marketing for Dorian.

In July 2008, Dorian Software announced its second quarter sales revenue was the highest in company history.

STEVENSON
PATTERSON '97

Greetings! Our nation is in a challenging time when we all want to be heard. Right now, everyone is focused on our country's credit crisis, the presidential elections and other issues. We have opinions, solutions and ideas, and we want to be heard.

As an alumna of Oglethorpe, I encourage you to be heard. A liberal arts education based in the vivacious city of Atlanta provided each of us with the opportunity to learn to think outside the box and discuss our opinions with others. We are thinkers, and we are doers.

Once the economy stabilizes and our next president is in office and we can once again shift our focus to other things, I encourage you to step up and volunteer at Oglethorpe, attend alumni events or spend an evening calling other alumni to encourage them to support the OU Fund. The National Alumni Association is always seeking new volunteers – you just need to speak up and be heard! Be heard in positive ways that can make our university even stronger.

Please mark your calendar and plan to attend Oglethorpe's Evening of Enchantment before the Boar's Head Ceremony on Saturday, December 6; come back to campus during Alumni Weekend April 17-19, 2009. If it's your reunion year (if your class year ends in a 4 or a 9), you'll get the chance to climb the tower and ring the Carillon bells! That's a great way to be heard (all over Brookhaven!).

Dr. Schall and the alumni office travel to various cities each year. That's a wonderful way for our alumni who are living around the country to reconnect and be heard. Just this fall, the visits included Charlotte, Raleigh, Jacksonville, Brunswick, Savannah and Washington, D.C. We'll be in your area this spring, Florida!

Another way you can speak up and be heard is to nominate deserving alumni for the awards that are presented during each Alumni Weekend. There is a nomination form enclosed or you can nominate someone online at www.alumni.oglethorpe.edu/alumniawardsform. Please think about fellow alumni you know who you would like OU to consider honoring with its prestigious awards and nominate them.

Get involved and be heard, and you'll help add to the countless positive things going on at Oglethorpe University! After all, Oglethorpe's motto is "Make a life. Make a living. Make a difference."

EDUCATION AND CAREERS

Reverend John M. Flanigen '50

assists at St. Matthias' Episcopal Church in Tuscaloosa, Alabama and is documenting his memories of world, national and local events and their impact on his life.

Col. Sheldon I. Godkin, USAF-Ret. '52

completed a 31-year career in the U.S. Air Force in 1983 and established and managed the University Club at Colorado State University where he retired from in 2004. The university's president awarded him honorary alumnus status and gave him a special meritorious service award. Recently, Godkin received the Rotary Club International's Four Avenues of Service award, one of Rotary's highest individual honors.

The class of 1958 celebrated its 50th anniversary during Alumni Weekend in March 2008 with a brunch in the Oglethorpe University Museum of Art. Each member was asked to share what they have been busy doing since graduation from Oglethorpe.

Peggy Compton '58 is a retired educator from the Cobb County School System. During her time as an educator, she was honored with the teacher of the year award. She also found time to become a Cobb Clean Committee Appointee and a member of the South Cobb Leadership Institute. Compton has been active in church and community activities since her retirement. She enjoys spending time her grandchildren, reading and traveling. Her travels have included trips to Europe, Canada, Mexico, Islands and all over the U.S.

Mary Anne Sharp '58 has found success in her professional life as both an educator in Atlanta Public Schools for 33 years and a conductor of the Decatur Civic Chorus for 45 years. Before retiring with the Atlanta Public System, Sharp wrote and directed several musicals based on children's literature and Georgia history—many which were aired on WABE and PBS. In 1993, Sharp was named artistic director of Dekalb International Choral Festival. This achievement is especially important to Sharp since she is a product of the City of Decatur School System. Since then, she has led the chorus on many tours around the world. These tours have included the United States, Italy, Spain, the United Kingdom, Germany and many other countries. The chorus has also had the privilege of performing in Carnegie Hall and giving mini-concerts in New York at Ground Zero. In May 2008, the chorus sang at the National Memorial Day Concert in the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., representing the state of Georgia.

Jim Clower '58 was an active member of the OU community earning an impressive four varsity letters from 1956-57 in tennis, baseball, basketball and cross-country. Soon after graduating from OU, Clower served our country and earned the rank of PFC or Private First Class. He then went on to the real estate business where he earned the highest brokerage I Real Estate the CCIM (Certified Commercial Investment Member) Designation in 1991. In 1997, he received the SR/WA designation or senior member, which is the highest designation in the International Right of Way Association. Clower has also been awarded a Certified General Appraiser certificate by the State of Georgia. He continues to work with his two sons Jim, Jr., and Joel.

As a student at OU, John Harms '58 was active in several campus organizations including Alpha Phi Omega, speech club and the Yamacraw staff. He then went into the military where he attained the rank of Colonel and is now a retired member of the United States Marine Corps. Harms continued his education at the University of Virginia, where he majored in counselor education and received a master's degree in education in 1977. Harms also served on the National Board of Counselors, The Oahu Veterans Council Board and the Military Officers Association of America. After a fulfilling career at BHP Petroleum Hawaii, Inc., and several years at Kahuku High and Intermediate School as a career counselor, Harms retired and now resides in Hawaii and plans to move back to the mainland in the near future where he can be more involved in Oglethorpe activities.

Ina Foster Moore's '58 most memorable moment was being elected Lady Oglethorpe and meeting her husband of 49 years, Alan Moore, who was voted Lord Oglethorpe that same year. After graduating from Oglethorpe with her master's degree in education, Moore went into the field of education where she has taught for 29 years. She is currently employed as a teacher at Henderson Middle School in the DeKalb County School System and enjoys spending time vacationing at the beach and visiting family.

Alan Moore '58 not only had the privilege of being voted Lord Oglethorpe during his time at the University but also met his wife—the Lady Oglethorpe of that same year. He also had the honor of being voted "Ugliest Man on Campus." After his memorable time at OU, Moore pursued a career in the healthcare field for 50 years. Moore now works as a commission salesman for Southern Business Systems and has lived in Atlanta since 1959. He has been active in his neighborhood swim club and became president of North Cumberland Swim Club.

Betty Stokes McGariety '58 came to OU as an older student and enjoyed her two years by taking part of the campus experience and completed her degree in elementary education in two years. Her first 10 years as a teacher were spent teaching seventh graders in Atlanta Public Schools. In 1969, McGariety was certified in library science at Emory University. She then went on to become an elementary school librarian for 20 years. After 30 years of service, McGariety retired from Atlanta Public Schools in 1986 and likes to believe that she made a difference those years. She is proud of her two children, three grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

After graduation from OU, Christina Rice Freeman '58 taught elementary school in the Atlanta Public School System while her husband, the late Judge Richard Freeman, established his law career. She also worked on her husband's political campaign, which he won and was elected to the Atlanta Board of Aldermen. Her husband was later appointed federal district judge by President Richard Nixon. After teaching, Freeman volunteered for an organization in support of schools like the Tallulah Falls School. Freeman now spends her time as an active member in the Northside Woman's Club and a garden club.

While at OU, Shirley Benefiel Geoghan '58 enjoyed spending time with her classmates and their many camping adventures. She also went to Korea with the Red Cross and then served as service club director for the USAF in England. Geoghan now enjoys retirement at her beautiful home on the sands of Lake Michigan with her husband, retired Lt. Col. Thomas Geoghan. Prior to retirement, Geoghan was president of the Pennsylvania Pro Life Federation and served on the board of directors for the National Right to Life.

During her time at OU, Ila Varelmann McCoy '58 enjoyed working with the campus group Oglethorpe Players, singing on the Oglethorpe TV show and being a member of the Duchess Club. McCoy and her husband Don are now retired civilian employees of the U.S. government. They both are active volunteers in the city of Las Cruces, New Mexico and in the fields of preservation (Paleozoic Trackways). Both are also members of the Mesilla Valley Choral where she is a soloist. McCoy plans to travel to Lemans, France, in June 2009 to perform with the Choral.

Ted Bayley '58 worked for the Boy Scouts of America after serving five years with the Marine Corps. He and his family became tired of moving so Bayley went to work at Georgia State University. He served in the business school as assistant dean and later became vice president of development and alumni affairs. He was asked by the board of St. Joseph's Hospital to serve as president of the Mercy Foundation. In 1999, Bayley was named National Fundraiser of the Year. In retirement, he has continued to share his expertise with many organizations. He most enjoyed working on many Habitat for Humanity houses. Bayley taught children and then adults in Sunday school for 40 years. He served the Atlanta Presbytery by serving as a moderator. Bayley now struggles with Alzheimers and is in several studies at Emory University. His favorite Oglethorpe memory is the curriculum and Pop Crow and friends.

Russell Eisenman '62, Ph.D., had a book, Creativity, Mental Illness and Crime, published by Kendall/Hunt. It contains essays and articles by him on a variety of psychology topics, with several being on his experiences working as a prison psychologist.

The West Point Woman's Club recently selected Lynda Papini Hines '64 as the club woman of the year. She was also selected as the club's woman of the year several years ago. Hines was selected as Teacher of the Year in 1987. She held a chairmanship on the Southern Association of Schools. Hines is a member of the Alpha Delta Kappa International Honorary Sorority of Women Educators and is still active in a local chapter of that group. In addition to her West Point Woman's Club work as second vice president, she is president of Friends of Hawkes Library.

Joan Phillips Millar '64 and J.D. "Don" Millar celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in August 2007 with a Holy Communion Service at Hanover Hall, officiated by the Right Reverend Milton Murray and attended by their immediate family members. Afterwards, the family celebrated with cake and returned to Chateau Elan for a buffet in the Versailles Room. In September 2007, Joan and Don welcomed grandchildren twins John Thomas Millar and Alison Taylor Millar.

Sharon Friedrich Williams '65 announced that as of June 30, 2008, her new career is that of a retired person who is going to spend as much of her new way of life as possible traveling around the country with her newly retired husband of 41 years, Mike.

Louis E. Rossman '69 of Philadelphia, Pa., was elected president of the American Association of Endodontists during its 2008 Annual Session, held April 9 - 12 in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada. Rossman has been actively involved in the activities of the Association for years, serving as president-elect from 2007-2008, vice president from 2006-2007, secretary from 2005-2006, treasurer from 2004-2005, and District I director from 2000-2003, while also participating in the work of numerous committees including Research and Scientific Affairs, Workforce Assessment, Public and Professional Affairs and Strategic Planning. He also has played an integral role in planning numerous annual sessions, serving as general chair of the meeting in 2002.

Dianne Jones Ford, M.D. '77 was a Grand Awards Judge in the Medicine and Health Category of the 2008 Intel International Science and Engineering Fair that was held in Atlanta May 11 - 16. Oglethorpe professor Dan Schadler was a Grand Awards Judge in the Plant Science Category of the Fair. In a classic example of the "it's a small world phenomenon," Schadler encountered Ford when she was ahead of him on an escalator in the Georgia World Congress Center. Ford was a student in the first class that Dr. Schadler taught when he joined the OU faculty in 1975.

Ellen Heckler O'Herlihy '82 recently enrolled in the Passport to Teaching program in Missouri to earn certification to teach English language arts for grades six to 12.

Tony Murphy '85 has joined Rich Products Corporation's Foodservice Division as a national account manager. Murphy's primary responsibility is to manage Rich's domestic and international military foodservice segment. Prior to joining Rich's, Murphy worked for Sara Lee Foodservice for nine years in its marketing and national accounts division. Preceding Sara Lee, he worked as a foodservice director for ARAMARK for 12 years.

Murphy works and resides in Commerce, Georgia.

Joselyn Butler Baker '91 joined the Georgia Chamber of Commerce as senior vice president for communications. She is responsible for the Chamber's public relations, media relations, membership communications and other internal and external communications efforts.

J. Alison Bess, Ph.D. '96, recently relocated to with her husband, Court Meyer, to Alexandria, Louisiana, for her new job as a psychologist for the Department of Immigration Health Services at the La Salle Detention Facility in Jena, Louisiana.

Nathan Sparks '98 was recently named to Georgia Trend magazine's 40 under 40. This is the 12th year the publication has selected 40 high-achieving Georgians under the age of 40 who are making their marks in business, government, education, the arts and the world of nonprofits.

Sparks lives in Brunswick and is the executive director of the Brunswick and Glynn County Development Authority.

Mary Bager Mali '00 is working as a senior systems analyst at St. John's University in New York, and she previously worked as an assistant director of admissions at Emory University Rollins School of Public Health and program assistant at Columbia University in New York City.

Look for Vince Pisani '00 in the current Keno (Georgia Lottery) TV ad. OU professor Jay Lutz's class is reading The Diary of Anne Frank and took his class to see Pisani in the theatrical production of The Diary of Anne Frank, a production by The Renaissance Project, Inc., in Atlanta. Pisani then followed up in October with a guest lecture in Lutz's class. He is also working as an acting coach for a talent agency in film casting and commercials.

Liz Campbell '01 was named the head women's basketball coach at Colorado College.

Melissa Stracener Beauregard '01 was awarded her master's degree in business administration from the University of Oklahoma in Norman, summer 2006. Her family has recently relocated from Oklahoma back to the Houston, Texas area, where she will begin pursuing her Ph.D. in marketing at the University of Houston.

Karen Anthony Schnick '02 began her doctoral program in education at Vanderbilt University in August 2007. She is an EXPERT (Experimental Education Research Training) pre-doctoral fellow, specializing in development, learning and diversity. She and engineer husband John live in Nashville with their dog Gracie.

After teaching elementary school for five years, Sharmaine Davis Mitchell '03 assumed the administrative position of webmaster and production studio teacher at Trinity School in Atlanta. She completed her master's degree in instructional technology in April 2008.

Mark DeLong '03 is an editor in Georgia Tech's creative services department, crafting copy for print and electronic communications. He was director of publications at Oglethorpe from January 2005 until April 2008. His freelance work includes writing for the national Power Girls magazine and editing for Atlanta's Jezebel magazine.

Angela Bagley Fitzpatrick '04 completed her master's degree in education from Georgia State University in June 2008. Her concentration was secondary English education, and she graduated with a 3.98 GPA. She is now teaching high school English in the Cobb County School District.

Rachel Lehr '04 is in Islamabad, Pakistan, where she is a Third Secretary of Regional Affairs at the U.S. Embassy. She is proud to be representing her country and working hard in the global war against terrorism.

Carlissa Carson '05 graduated from Emory University School of Law in May 2008. Her work concerning the negative implications of the recently enacted Military Commissions Act was published in the Emory Law Journal (May 2008). She now attends Georgetown Law and will receive an LL.M. in international law and a certificate in international human rights. While at Emory, Carson was notes and comments editor of the Emory Law Journal. Carson is a military intelligence officer in the U.S. Army Reserves (1LT). Prior to pursuing the LL.M., Carson worked for the DOD in the Office of Military Commissions at the Pentagon as a staff attorney and supervisor/manager of a group of intelligence analysts. She will continue her work on the U.S. Supreme Court case of Hamdan v. Rumsfeld and work on other cases concerning detainees held at U.S. Naval Base, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Catherine "Cat" Lawler '05 graduated from the University of Georgia School of Law in May 2008. She currently resides in Atlanta and works as a staff attorney for the Honorable Judge John J. Goger at the Fulton County Superior Court. She would love to meet up with Petrels now that she is back in the city!

Brittany Marie Bennett '06 graduated from the University of South Florida with a master's degree in library and information science on May 3, 2008.

Jessica Griffin '06 graduated from the George Washington University, Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration in May 2008. She received a master's degree in public administration with a concentration in nonprofit management. Griffin entered the MPA program as one of five recipients of a merit-based graduate assistantship and scholarship and graduated with a 3.9 GPA. She is employed at the Capital Area Food Bank in Washington, D.C., working in development and fundraising. Griffin also serves as treasurer on the board of directors of the D.C. chapter of Young Nonprofit Professionals Network.

MARRIAGES

Stephanie Phillips '90 surprised everyone by committing herself in marriage to Joshua Robert Copland on May 3, 2008, in a roaring '20s-style wedding held at Callanwolde Fine Arts Center in Atlanta. PARENTS

Many thanks to the following parents of current students and of alumni who contributed to Oglesharpe University between July 1, 2007 and June 30, 2008. We recognize their gifts to the Oglesharpe Fund, Oglesharpe Museum of Art, Oglesharpe Athletic Department and other special funds. The entire OU community thanks these donors for their generosity and support.

HERITAGE SOCIETY

THE NESBIT CEDERE

HERITAGE SOCIETY

Nesbit Cedere, a Latin phrase pronounced "nes-keet keh-deh-reh," was taken from the Oglethorpe family crest as the university's motto. It translates as "He does not know how to give up" and perfectly captures the pride and tenacity of those who give loyalty to Oglethorpe. The following donors have remembered the university in their estate plans to ensure its future success.

ALUMNI AWARDS

Nomination Deadline:

January 9, 2009

Spirit of Oglethorpe Award: Builds on the Oglethorpe motto: Make a life. Make a living. Make a difference. It is given to a loyal alumna/us who lives according to the Oglethorpe motto and strives to make a difference by exhibiting creativity, purposefulness and a commitment to improving the quality of his or her community.

Young Alumnus Award: Is presented to an outstanding graduate of the last 10 years. This award recognizes those graduates who have shown leadership and inspiration to other young alumni through their participation in career, public service, volunteer or continuing education activities.

Talmage Award: Given to an outstanding alumna/us or Oglethorpe community member who has contributed time, talent or financial resources to one or more programs of the university.

School Bell Award: Alumni or past/present faculty member who has made a lasting contribution to the field of education.

Athletic Hall of Fame: Alumni or former athletic staff members who have excelled in athletics at Oglethorpe or in their professional life. Alumni will be considered for induction at least 10 years after graduation.

Circle of Honor: A positive role model in the Oglethorpe community who has played a prominent role as a volunteer and/or supporter of our student athletes.

How do I nominate a deserving recipient?

Please provide as much of the following information as possible. It is helpful to include materials that support your nomination such as a vitae/resume, newspaper clippings or commendatory letters.

- Indicate for which award you are nominating the alumna/us
- Nominee's full name, class year and complete address (if known)
- All business/professional information for nominee
- A brief explanation of the qualifications of this nominee for the award.
- Include your own name, your relationship to the nominee, email address and daytime phone number

How are the nominees selected?

The Awards and Recognition Committee of the Alumni Board of Directors meets to review nominations and recipients are approved by the entire Alumni Board of Directors during their winter meeting. Award winners are notified and are invited to receive their award at the annual Awards Dinner during Alumni Weekend April 17-19, 2009. Nominees remain on the nomination list for three years. A complete list of all award winners can be found at www.alumni.oglethorpe.edu/awards

Nominations may be submitted to:

Barbara Bessmer Henry '85, Director of Alumni Relations Oglethorpe University, 4484 Peachtree Rd. NE, Atlanta, GA, 30319

Phone: 404-364-8443; Fax: 404-364-8500. Submit online at www.alumni.oglethorpe.edu/awards or email alumni@oglethorpe.edu.

Ashish Thakur '99

CAN YOU SPOT OUR POTENTIAL?

Name: Brandon, age 9

Achievements:

- Learned to read at age 4
- Leading scorer on his soccer team
- Knows the 12x12 multiplication table
- Organized a pet walking service in his neighborhood

Future plans:

- Oglethorpe University, Ba in International Studies, class of 2021
- Start own import/export business, go public, retire at age 29

Maybe Brandon is a little too young to be thinking about Oglethorpe just yet. But I bet he reminds you of a talented, inspirational young mind who is university bound in the near future? You can help build on Oglethorpe's reputation as home to the best and brightest.
